

The Adventure of BOB & ROB

Once upon a time on a farm in the Kent area, two unfertilized eggs were laid today next to each other. One is characterized by its thick eyebrows and the other one by its pickles. Seems to be that the one with thick eyebrows has a strong character but friendly and it wants to make friend with the one with pickles which is a little bit timid. As they share the same birthday and living in the same place, they get along very well. When they asked each other's name, they didn't know their own name, so the one with thick eyebrows proposed giving each other a name, and it name the one with pickles 'Bob', then in turn Bob gives it the name 'Rob'.

During these days, they are having such a great time together, talking to each other, playing in the field (red light, green light).

But that day has come. They are collected, checked, packed and transported to the supermarket as their destiny is served by human. However, during these processes, the two were accidentally separated and each was transported to a different location. Bob is very sad, because it has not been separated from Rob since he was born, they were getting along like brothers. Also, Bob is feeling nervous in a new environment, it will be scared when the other eggs greet it, and it has no courage to communicate with the others.

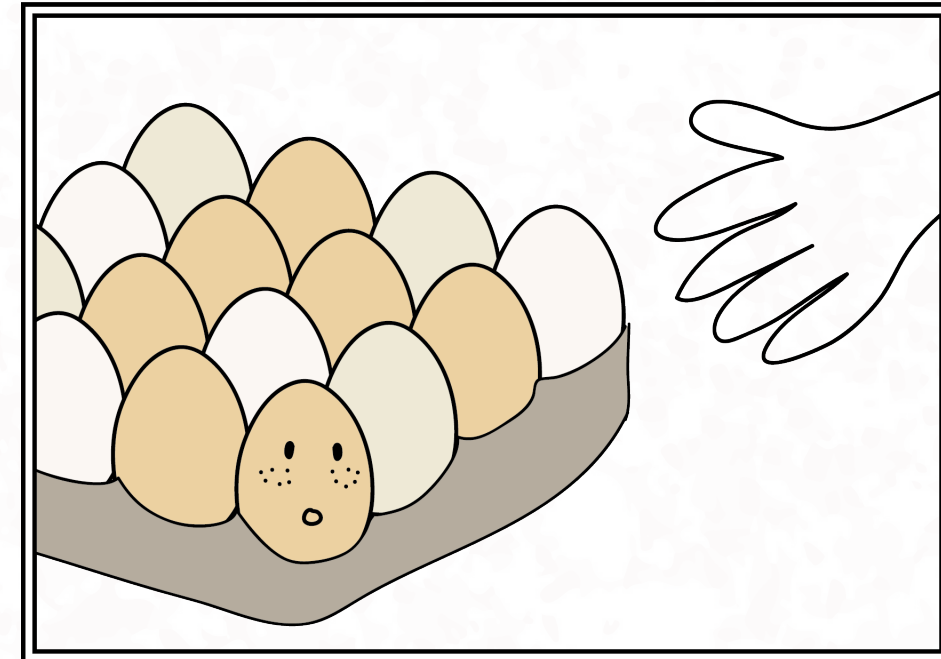

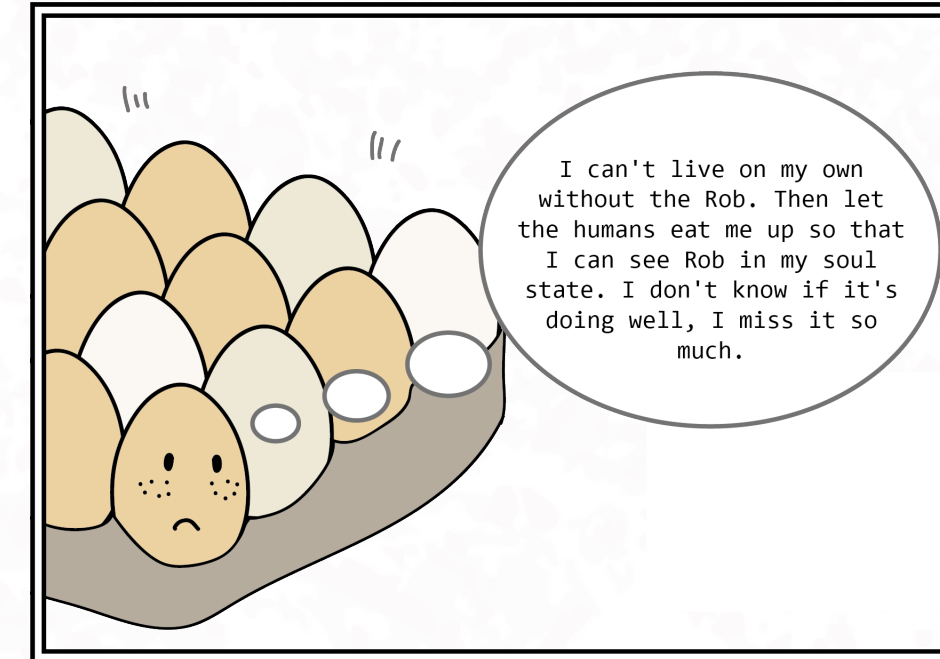

By the time they got to the supermarket, all the other eggs had made friends, and bob still didn't have the courage to talk to anyone, which resulted in a more introverted personality. It thought to itself, "I can't live on my own without the Rob. Then let the humans eat me up so that I can see Rob in my soul state. I don't know if it's doing well, I miss it so much." However, its wish comes true, as soon as its box of eggs was bought and brought home, its owner ate it.

5

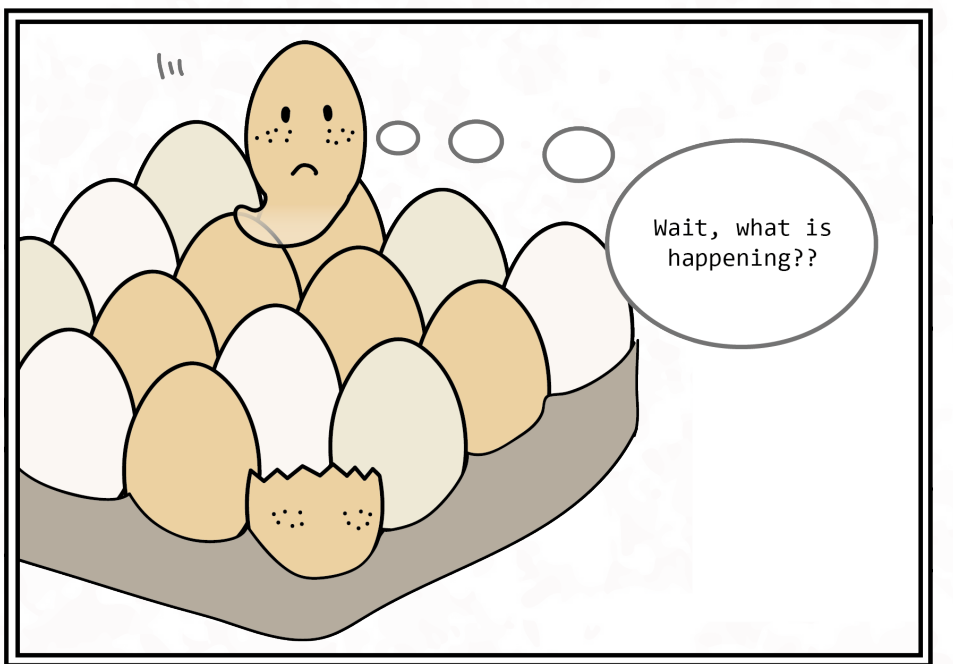

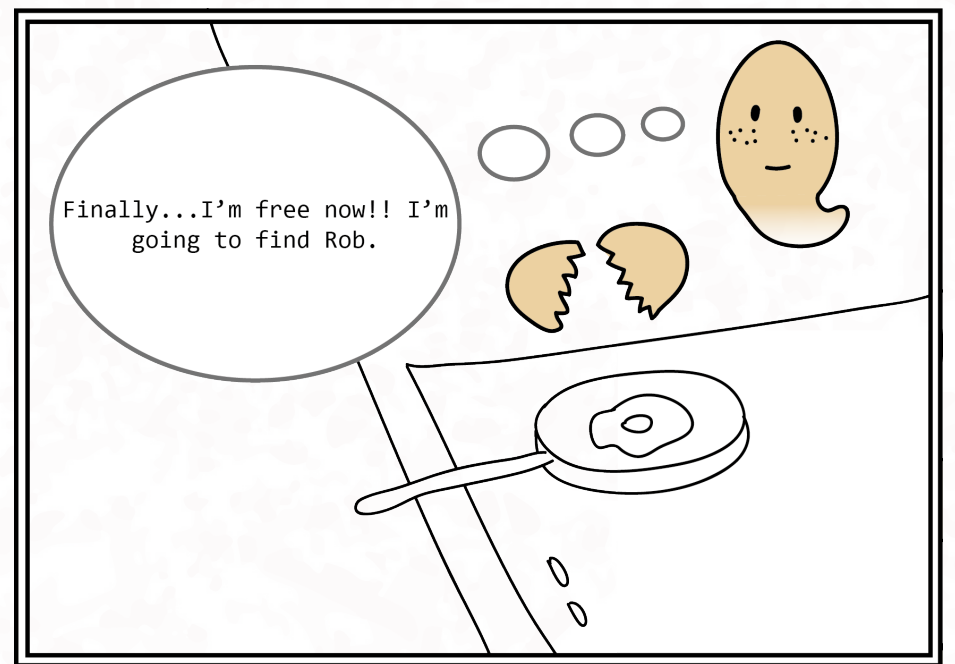

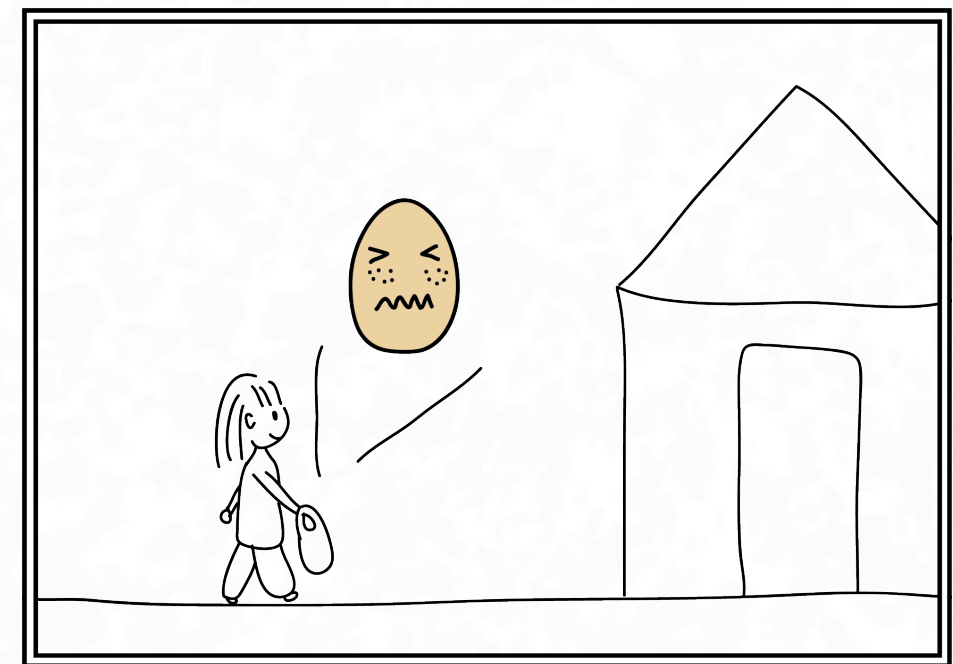

6

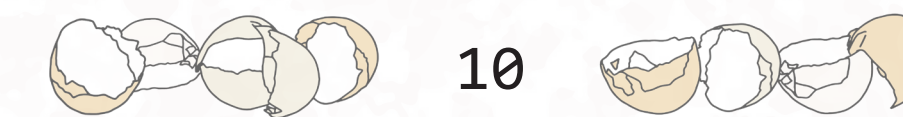

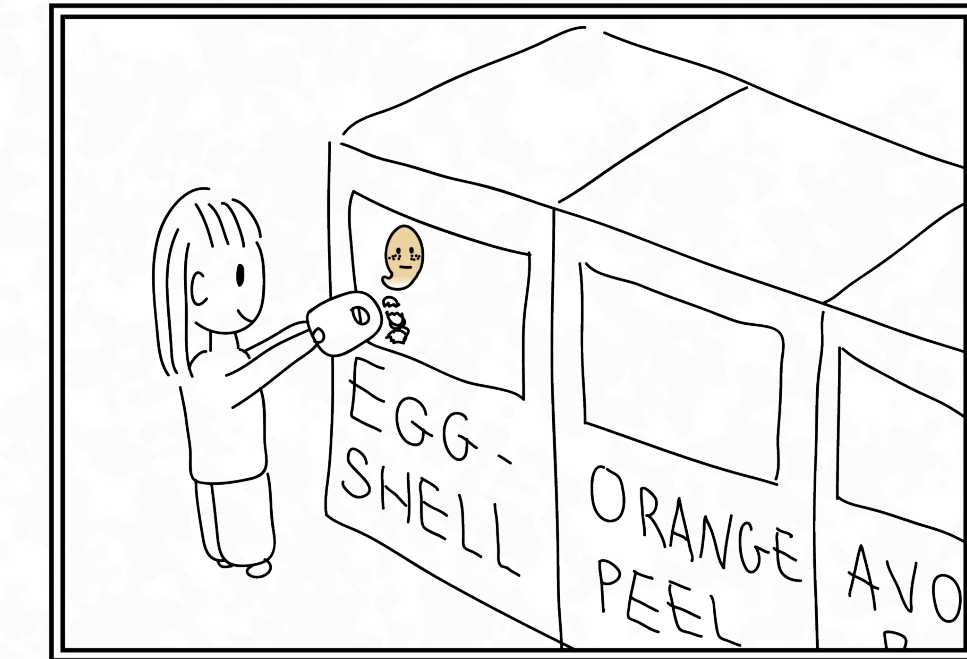

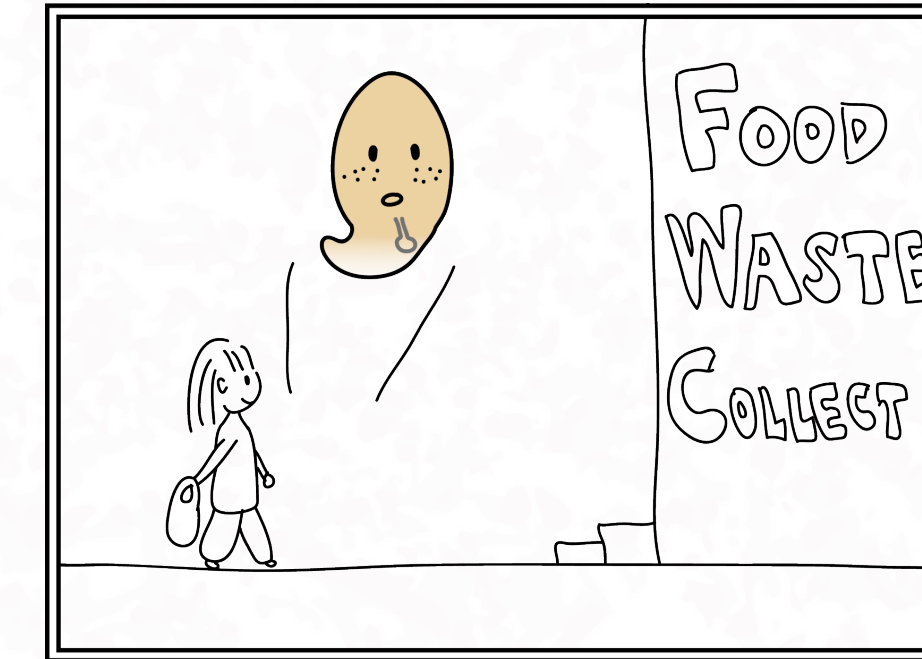

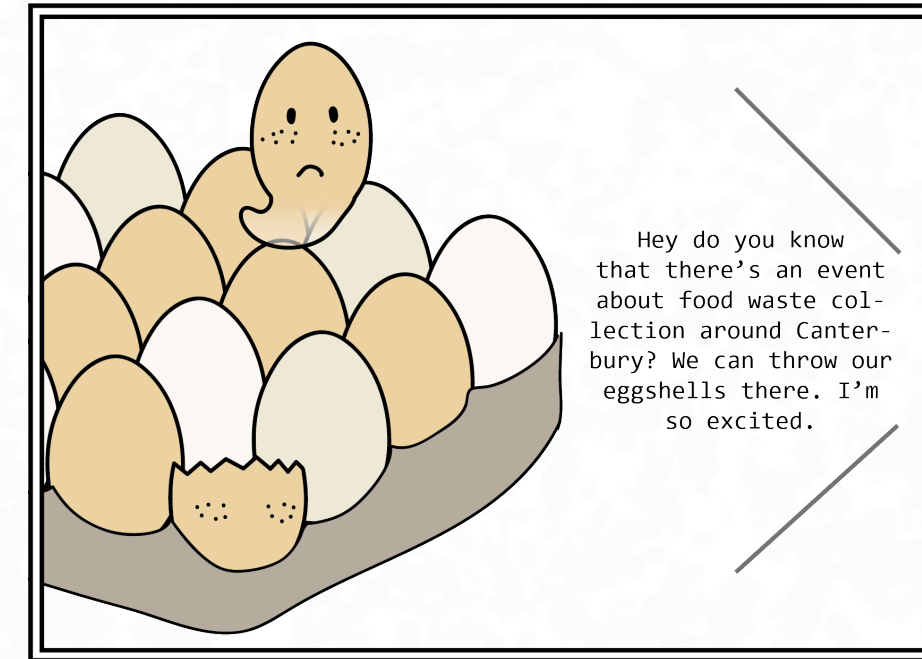

Bob is relieved that it doesn't have to live in fear with other eggs. Now it is free to find Rob as soon as his owner threw the shell away, but his owner cleans it and put it back in its place, and Bob wondered why it has to be kept when it had no longer use.

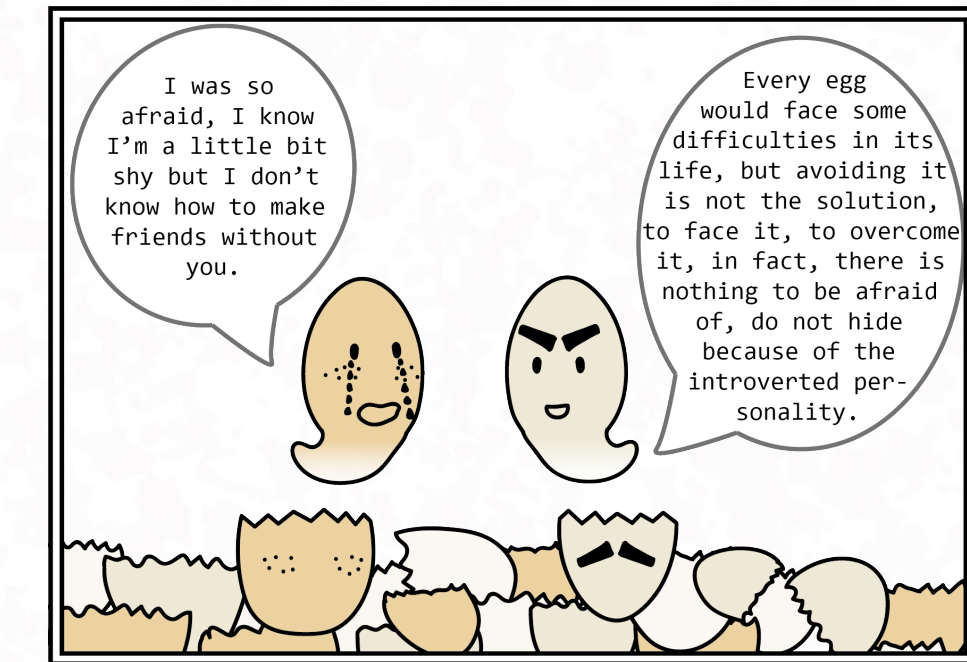

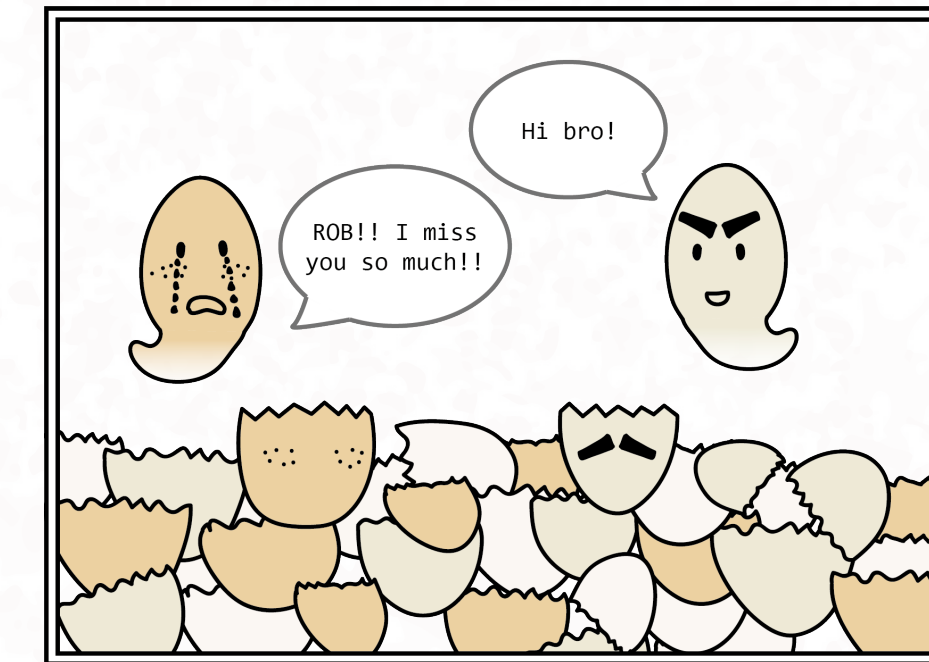

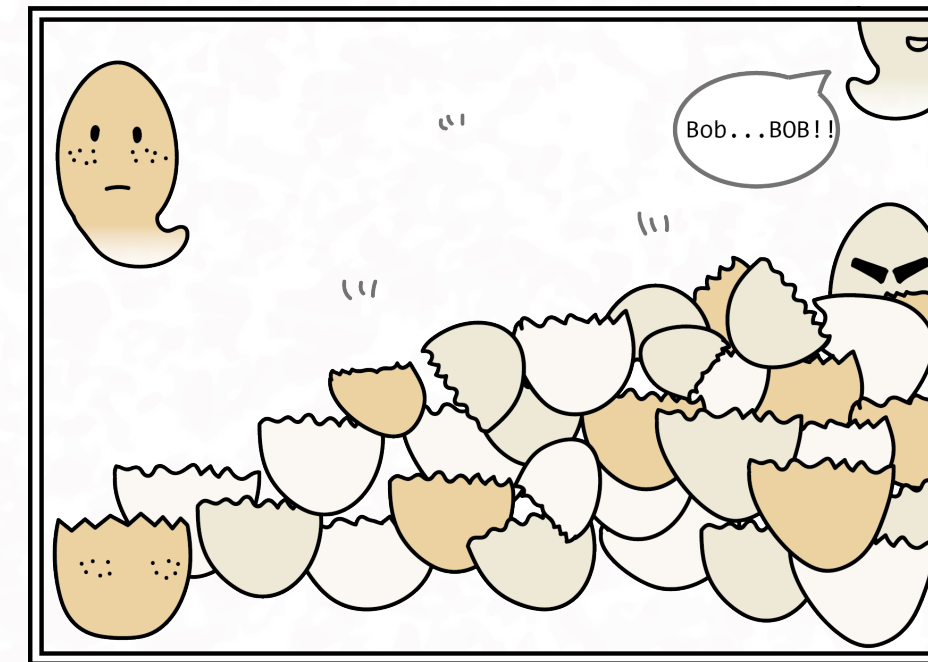

After all, it heard from his owner that there is an activity going on in Canterbury about food waste collection, and the eggshells were included in. Bob is desperate, so it has to stay with the other eggs for a while until the next destination.

After the last egg is consumed, it's finally time for them to go to that mysterious place. Bob is anxious and nervous, confused about its future life.

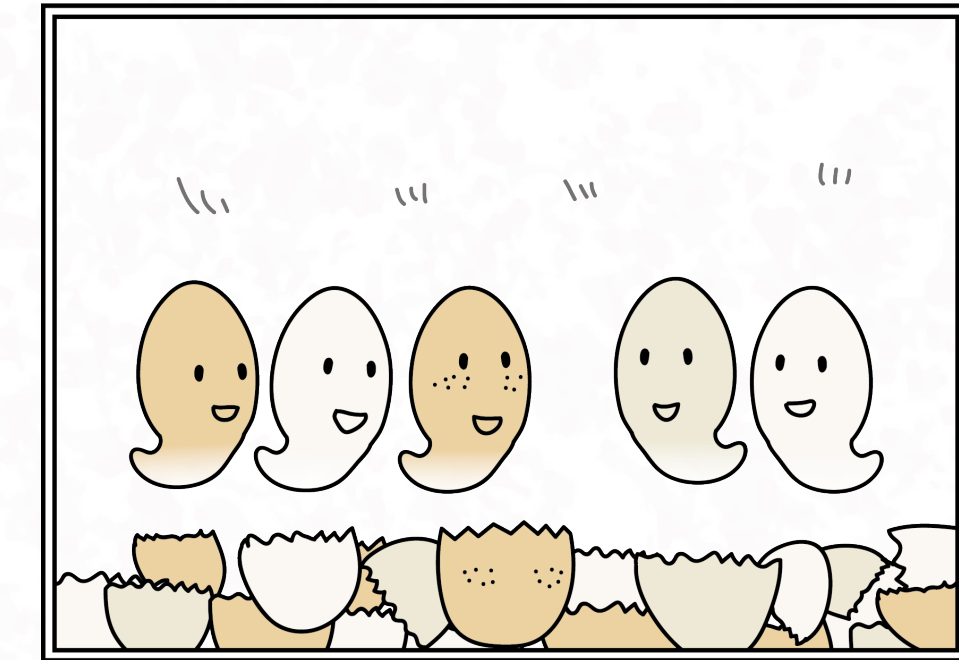

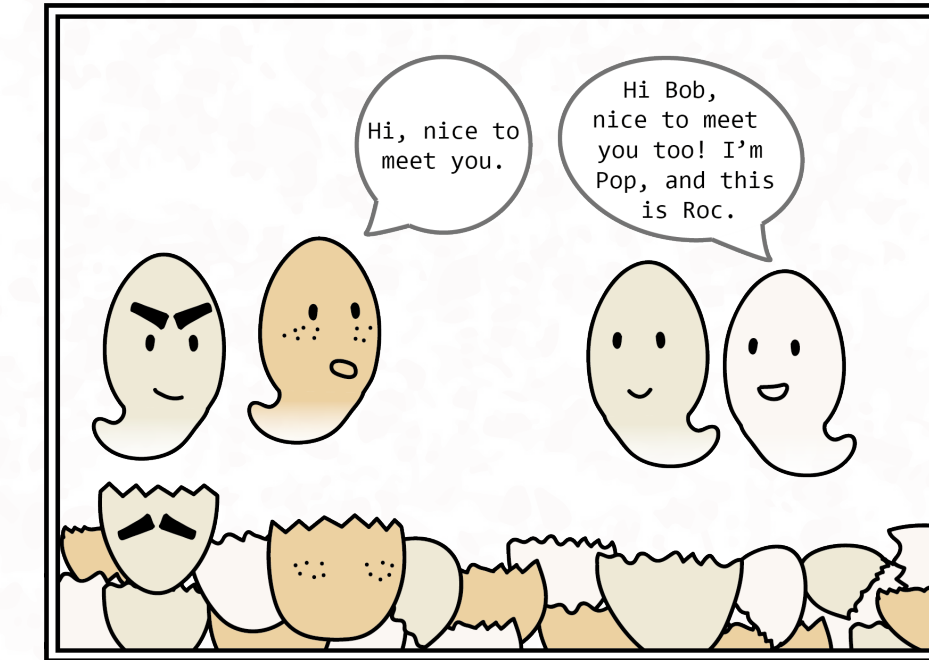

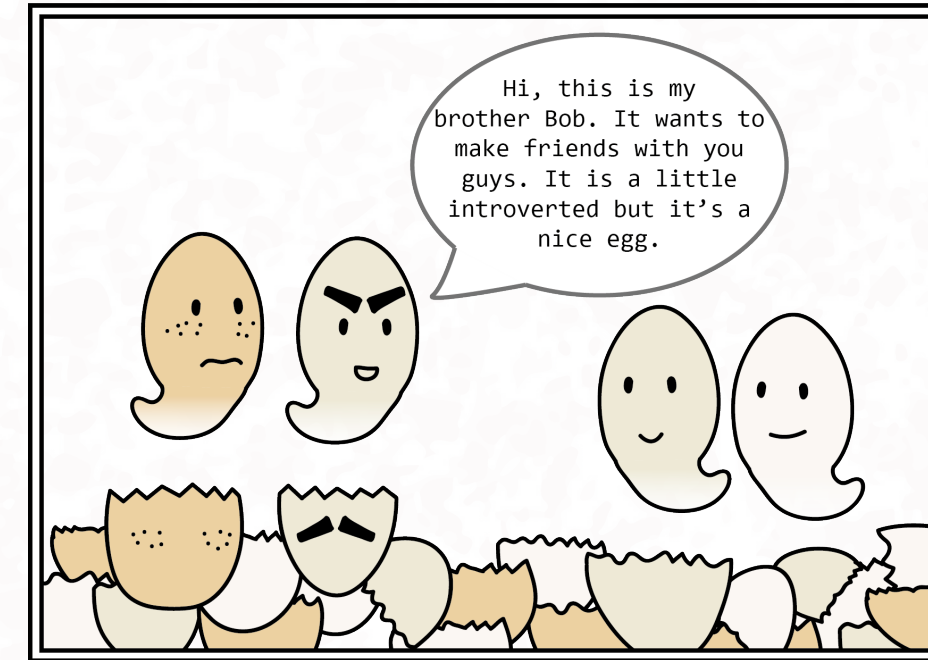

So when it is thrown into the recycling bin of the mysterious place, it hides in the corner, waiting to be processed. At this time, a familiar voice reached its ears, and Bob is shocked, thinking that it must be a misheard. The voice calls out its name again. Bob turns around with confusion, but it shocked again, it is Rob appearing in front of it. Bob was so happy that tears flowed down its face, not expecting to run into its closest relatives one day. They spoke a lot and shared their experiences, and Bob spoke as never before after they were both separated. It also talked about the difficulties it encountered in making friends because of its personality. So Rob, an extroverted egg, enlightened Bob about this, telling it that every egg faces some difficulties in life, but avoiding it is not the solution, to face it, to overcome it, in fact, there is nothing to be afraid of, do not hide because of the introverted personality.

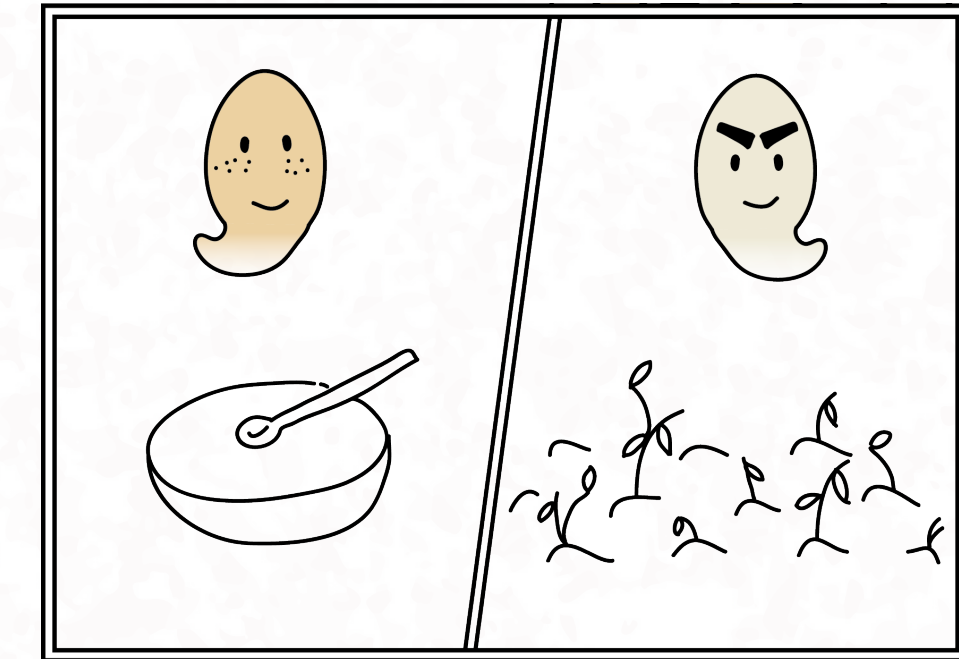

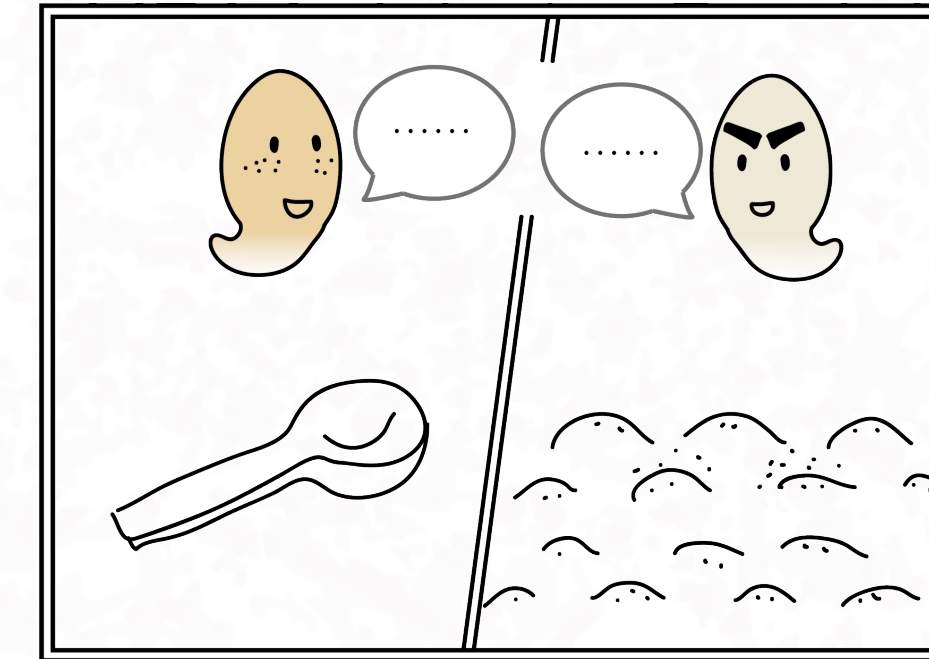

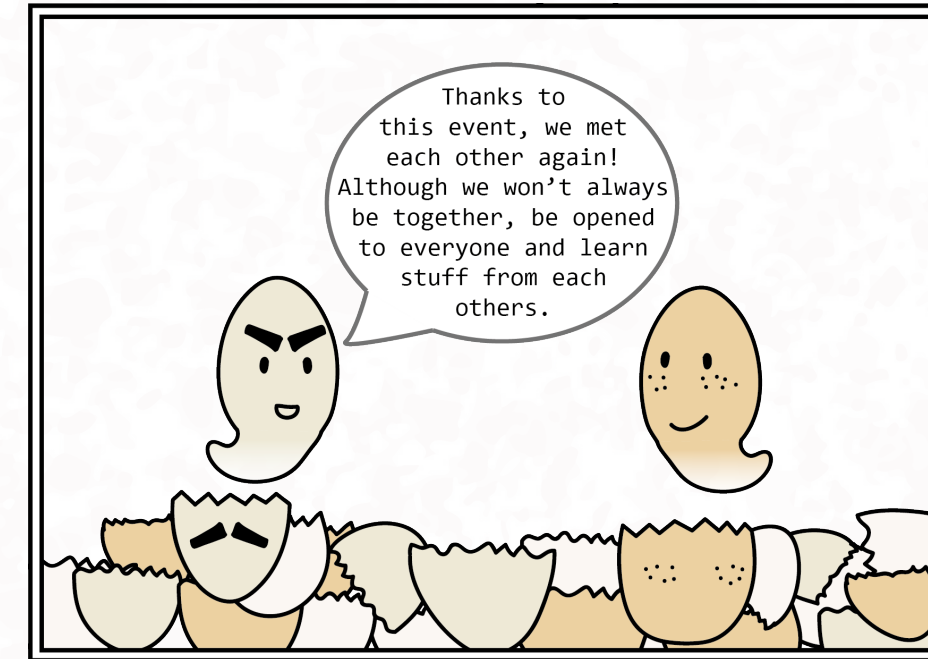

Later Rob helped Bob to try making friends with others. After countless attempts and experiences, Bob lived up to the expectations and took the first step, successfully to be able to talk with other eggs comfortably.

Finally, Rob also tells Bob that they have the chance to extend their lives because of this event, although they won't always be together, in fact, they will meet different eggs along the way and learn from each other.

In the end, Bob becomes a material for making spoons, mixing with other food waste, and getting along well. They would often chat with each other but in soul form. They are satisfied that they can contribute and add value. On the other hand, Rob has been locked in a sealed container to be used as a fertilizer, which is another way to increase food waste value.

THE
END

