Idea Development

It all began with...

Maybe I should tell my parents about how stressed I feel

"Hey I've been feeling kinda stressed"

"YOU HAVE IT SO EASY, WAIT UNTIL YOU GET A JOB"

Never again

Background

I wanted to provoke a strong sense of emotional resonance amongst the audience, by simply telling a plain story. Just like the meme, easy but punchy.

WHAT is the story about

It is a short film about a man trying to present true himself. The man in the story represents many of us: give up some parts of ourselves and attempt to fit in the world. 'We live in a society' (Joker 2019), we are affected by each other.

WHY this project

Being 'different' from others sometimes needs a lot of courage. And sometimes, we just compromise. We give up, and we hide our true selves. Some people, at last, accept it... but I personally do not want to. The film means a lot to me. It reminds me I once had that ambition.

What makes this project UNIQUE

It is kind of a drama film but not as usual as other common drama films. It is built in an abstractive room. It is a bit surreal, but it is telling something real. Sometimes it only needs one space and two colours to deliver a message.

Script..... but not a SCRIPT

It is an abstract art film. There is no dialogue, with one character, in one location. In this case, I preferred not to write a traditional script, since the special part of this project is the character doing almost the same things every day. For this monotony, I wrote a script which tells every action of the character and marked the differences between each day.

Story

[Day One] Alarm rings. The man opens his eyes and wakes up, turns off the alarm, wears the white shirt, and leaves the house. Background sounds imply the outside world and he is working. He goes back to the room from the opposite door, takes off the white shirt, and lies on the bed.

[Day Two] Alarm rings. The man opens his eyes and wakes up, turns off the alarm, (glances at the yellow shirt and then the white shirt) wears the white shirt, and leaves the house. Background sounds imply the outside world and he is working. He goes back to the room from the opposite door, takes off the white shirt, and lies on the bed.

[Day Three] Alarm rings. The man opens his eyes and wakes up, turns off the alarm, (considering between the yellow shirt and the white shirt, about to take the yellow shirt but finally picks the white one) wears the white shirt, and leaves the house. Background sounds imply the outside world and he is working. He goes back to the room from the opposite door, takes off the white shirt, and lies on the bed.

[Day Four] Alarm rings. The man opens his eyes and wakes up, turns off the alarm, (considering between the yellow shirt and the white shirt, and choose the yellow one) wears the yellow shirt, and leaves the house. Background sounds imply the outside world and he is working (the sound this time is a chaos, much louder and messier than usual). He goes back to the room from the opposite door (upset and irritated), takes off the yellow shirt (and throw it into a dustbin), and lies on the bed.

[Day Five] Alarm rings. The man opens his eyes and wakes up, turns off the alarm, wears the white shirt, and leaves the house. Background sounds imply the outside world and he is working. He goes back to the room from the opposite door (carrying a bag, he then takes out a brand new white shirt from the bag and hang it, then he takes out a small potted yellow flower and puts it next to the alarm on the shelf). Cut to black scene.

[Day Six] Black scene. Alarm rings. The man opens his eyes.

In this film, as a director, I intend to give the audience insights into the characters, provoking them to consider ways in which they are different from others and whether they have ever changed themselves because of others' points of view. The character stands for an 'ordinary man', just like many others else in the world: going to work, being late because of traffic congestion, dealing with colleagues, commuting back home and sleeping. The colour white represents general values or rules followed by most of the people, and yellow in the film symbolises the character's own personality and his belief.

In A Pigeon Sat on a Branch Reflecting on Existence (2014), director Roy Andersson uses a lot of (and only) long still shots to portray the film. Since I had planned to use only immobile shots, which can create calmness and the ordinary I wanted to make more, I looked into his works and found myself fascinated by them.

Casting

- ◆ 27-35
- ◆ Male
- ◆ Do not mind being topless
- ◆ No/less beard
- ◆ Long hair

In my story, the character symbolises an ordinary person. To make the audience easier to get into the role, I was looking for an actor who has less personal features.

Most of the actors who are willing to be shirtless are very ripped, and that is what I did not prefer. Another crucial point I was considerate of was the facial structure. Since all the elements I put in the scene look geometric, in order to continue the sentiment, I did not prefer a rounded-faced feature to show up in the frames. Instead, I was looking for—I funnily called—a box face.

Taking all considerations together, I found one actor who almost matches all the priorities. However, just four days before the shoot he told me he got a new big tattoo recently on his right arm. I regard tattoos are a personal mark, so I had no choice but to search for another actor. It was a really difficult task, and I ended up getting a fine actor who does not match pretty well but is close to the facial structure I was hunting.

As it has been mentioned in the 'script', the actions of the character are almost the same every day. So as I planned to do in the shots, which can be seen in the storyboard. Since there were many groups needed to use the studio, apart from the time for set building, I could only arrange one day for the shooting. I collected the shots which are filmed from the same angle together and placed them into order from wide angles to close-ups to avoid damaging the white set in the early stage. In the shot list, the same colour means the same camera position—which can be seen that there are twelve of it in total.

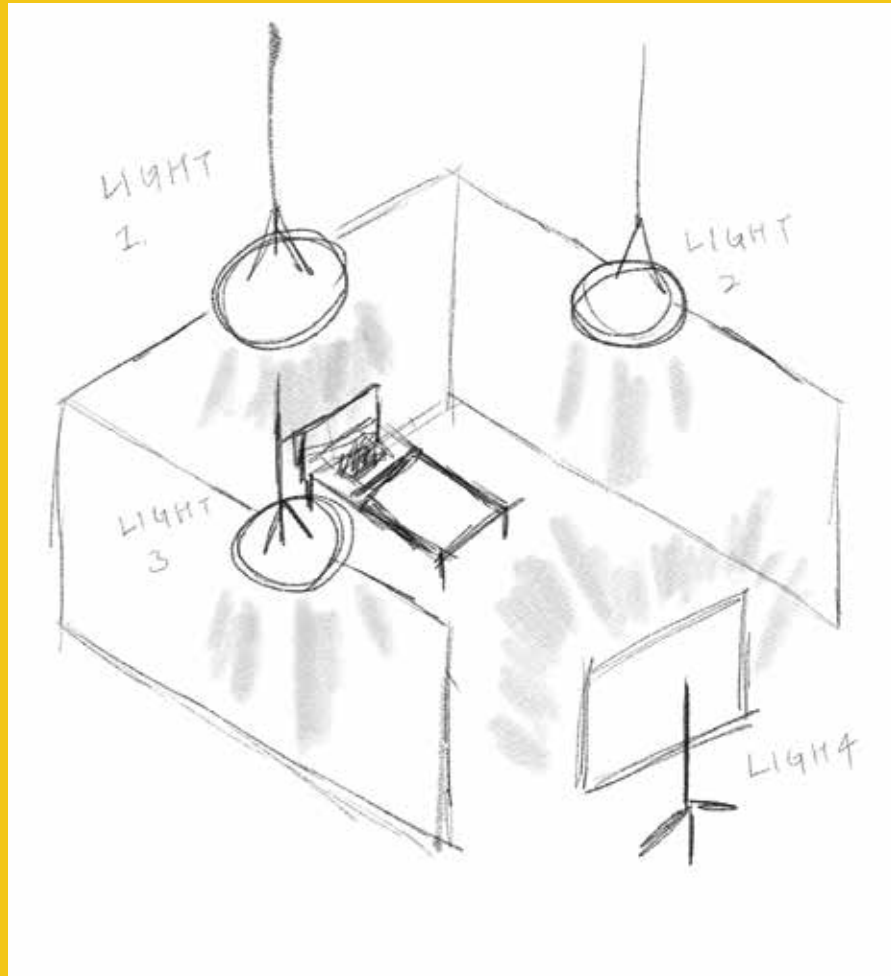

I aimed to create slight differences between the exact same frames when it comes to him making different decisions. The differences I meant are not only in the movements or expressions of the actor but also in the composition of the frames.

Take the getting dressed scene for an example. On the second day, he directly walks toward the white shirt, and the next day he is standing in the middle of the two shirts, then finally the third day, he stands in front of the yellow one and picks it up. As time goes on, it can be seen in the frames, that he moves closer and closer from the white one to the yellow one.

Equipment List
CAMERA	LIGHTING	SOUND
Blackmagic URSA PRODUCTION	Ambient Light (in G12)	foley in studio (post-production)
Manfrotto 116 Heavyweight Tripod (URSA Production)	Large LED Pannel Light (in G12)
Zeiss CP.2 Superspeed T1.5 35mm/50mm/85mm lens set (EF mount)	Light Bouncer (in G12)
Samyang Xeen EF Lens set (14mm/24mm/35mm/50mm/85mm)	Light Difusser (in G12)
Swit V-mount Battery Kit	C-stand,knuckle,arm
Clapperboard	2" Polyboard Holder
	Wind-up Stand
	16amp Distribution Unit
	16amp Cee-form Cable 10m

As I am also the cinematographer for this project, I made the equipment list according to the scene I wanted to create. I choose to use Blackmagic URSA instead of Canon C300 because I like its appearance in the camera and it was more convenient for me since I did not have to attach an extra monitor to it. Although it is quite heavy, the filming location was only in the studio. As to the sound department, it had been suggested in the prior sound design tutorial that we use foley for all of the sounds. In this production stage, we did not have to record any soundtrack on site.

Test 01

Test 02

After the personal meeting with Chris Pinnock, test one was the first lighting that came to my mind. While after actually trying it, I found I did not like the effect it created. I expected it to be flat, but the way we lit it showed lots of dark shadows. So we moved on to the next try. It did not work as well as I imaged but that was the best option at that moment.

After the lighting test, I came to know and booked the extra equipment that we needed, which are the red-coloured items on the equipment list.

For the Blackmagic URSA, this was my first time using it as the camera for a project. In order to get used to it, we tried filming some shots just for practice. There are some close-up shots of eyes in my storyboard, so we did a few exercises.

Set Design & Set Building

From 3D model to real set

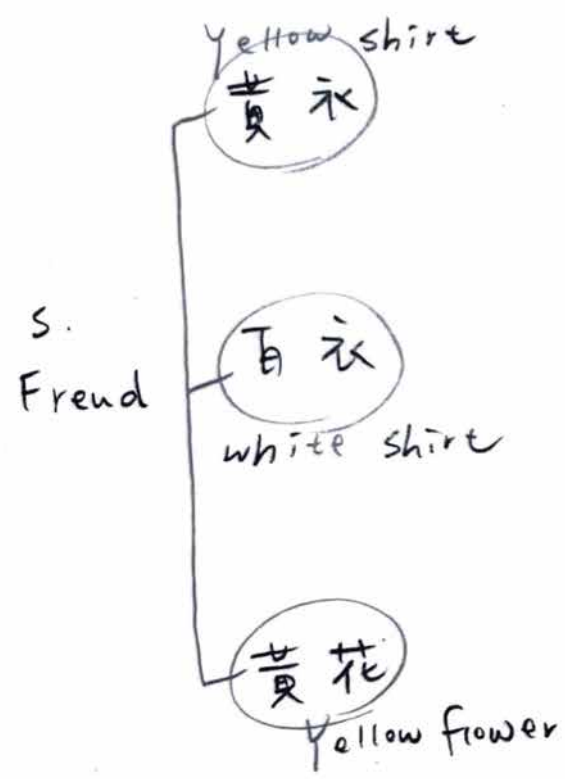

I designed the room to have two opposite doors so that the man can exit from one and then enter from another, just like an invisible circle—so as to suggest his endless life routine. In terms of props, the last day of summer vacation in my country is usually the 31st of August, and in the film, 8.31 is the time by the alarm rings. For me, the time after '831' always represents a fresh start: the first day of school when I was a kid, and another brand new day when we become adults. That is why it must be an electric clock.

At first, we thought that this time we could rely on the experience of the previous set building from the last term to create. However, we did not know what kind of material would be proper to buy. Before the set building started, we went to meet Bruce Hill for help. Besides, I also went to my friend who does product design, to discuss the best option on the lower budget. At last, we made the decision of using tiles for the floor instead of canvas—which is more expensive—or paper and foam board—which might easily get destroyed.

It was not a mistake that there is only one handle on each door, I did it on purpose. The reason was to make it more surreal, and inferred that the character always enters and exits from the separate doors.

Could not put the white paint directly on the tile, the two colours were mixed together.

Making a door is the most difficult part.

Assembling the bed and found a stripe broken.

We arranged three days for set building. Thanks to my classmates, friends from the product design course and game design course, a February intake filmmaking student, and juniors in bachelor, there were a total of seven people extra helping us build the set.

ACTORS Volunteer Agreement for the participation in student films

(Agreement)

01/05/2022

Dear Aiden Hawkins,

This Agreement sets out our aspirations in respect of your voluntary participation in the production of UCA's student films (as detailed below).

Production Title: The Yellow Shirt

Producer: Yi Ling Hsieh (Edline)

Unit: FFLM7003

Director: Yi Ling Hsieh (Edline)

Group: MA

1. VOLUNTEER ROLE

You have agreed to volunteer as an Actor for the above production and to be available during the following filming periods:

16/05/2022

Edline will notify you of suggested times and dates for when you may be required, however it is your and Edline's joint responsibility to agree when you may participate in the Production.

In the event that you no longer wish to participate in the Production as a volunteer, or if you are unable to volunteer when expected, please notify Edline as soon as possible.

By entering into this Agreement, we trust that you will perform your role to the best of your ability, and agree to follow our procedures and standards, including health and safety and equal opportunities. You can also expect us to deal with you in accordance with our Equal Opportunities Policy.

2. INDUCTION AND SUPERVISION

Your main point of contact pursuant to this Agreement and your participation is Edline. She will agree the scope and limits of your volunteering role and will explain the aims and schedule for the Production. She will discuss the Production risk assessment and notify you of any procedures which will apply to you during the Production to ensure your health and safety.

Studio Lighting	Cast/Crew - could get burnt from mishandling the lights, and could burn retina from looking into the lights.	Ensure all crew handling lights have been inducted to use them & will wear appropriate lighting gloves to avoid burns. All cast and crew are made aware of any changes to lighting set ups, particularly after a new set up is made & when near doorways. When lights are turned on an announcement will be made. Ensure that lights are turned off when not in use and given 20 minutes to cool down before being packed up. No lights set up near flammable materials.	1	1	1

Since we had a bed in our scene, we had no choice but to buy a new one—it is too difficult for us to carry a built double bed from another place to the studio. Fortunately, we kept the props well and most of the stuff we bought online could be returned and refunded. Comparing the budget I made with the actual expenses, we did save a lot of money.

Execution

Working with the actor is another challenge for me. Since I am not an English native speaker, I found it really difficult to completely deliver my thought to him.

Take the getting up from bed scene as an example. I wanted him to stop for a bit after every single movement. However, he tended to slow down every action instead of having a gap between each action. For this shot, we took at least five takes to reach what I expected. Sometimes I wanted him to be faster but should not look rushed, and sometimes I wanted him to slow down the pace but not his body should not look soft.

Happily, by the end of the day, we not only finished all of the shots but even wrapped almost half an hour before the estimated time.
