

Introduction

I used the song "Goodbye Blue Sky" as the starting point for my creation and as the background music for the video.

This song also reflects the impact of war on the childhood of the lead singer and songwriter, Roger Waters. Waters lost his father during World War II, which had a profound effect on him. The lyrics and music of this song convey the trauma and fear brought by war, particularly the psychological impact on young people and children. While scars may heal, the wounds will always remain.

This is precisely the idea I want to express through my font design. Ultimately, I hope that people in every corner of the world can look up and see a blue sky.

CAUSE

Once, my country experienced a cruel war.

At this moment, countless people are still losing their lives because of war.

IDEA

The fear and damage brought by the war are hard to heal.

Using the memory of war as a backdrop.

Incorporate the red gauze used in war into the typography.

These are the traces of wounds being mended, as well as vivid and striking memories.

PURPOSE

I hope this red line can constantly remind people.

We should not remain silent.

I hope that people in every corner of the world can look up and see the blue sky.

A font with a red gauze.
