ORMA is a furniture object that explores how emotional value can grow through memory, use and time. It invites personal experiences to become part of the object, while its materials naturally change and carry traces of everyday life. Rather than treating ageing and wear as imperfections, ORMA embraces them as records of lived experiences, allowing the object to become increasingly personal and meaningful over time.

01

DESIGNED TO REMEMBER.

ORMA explores how furniture can hold personal meaning.

A dedicated surface allows memories and personal experiences to become part of the object, creating a connection between the user and the furniture.

What begins as a designed object gradually becomes something personal.

02

MADE TO AGE

Materials change with time.

Wood develops marks, texture and warmth. Metal gradually develops its own character and patina. These changes are not treated as imperfections, but as traces of everyday life.

ORMA is designed to become more individual as it ages.

03

A MEMORY IN EVERY TRACE.

Personal photographs can become physical traces within the surface of ORMA.

The memory remains quietly embedded within the object, waiting to be revealed through interaction.

Your memories.

Your traces.

Your ORMA.
